lio Arcacha, whose name was linked with the Kennedy assassination probe in New Orleans, Thursday was charged with simple burglary in Houston.

Sheriff Bill Decker received a visit from Terrebonne Parish Atty. William Breton, who charged he is in connection with the burglary of a municipal court at Houma in 1961. Arcacha voluntarily went to the sheriff's office here and paid $1,000 bond set by Justice of Peace Charlie T. Duhon. State authorities had a warrant for his arrest.

Earlier in the week, Arcacha was charged with conspiracy to commit burglary at Houma. That warrant came from Orleans Dist. Atty. John T. Morris, who claims the assassination of President Kennedy was plotted in his city. Arcacha has said he was extradited on the charge because there were no laws in Louisiana which would do the same for a burglary allegation. Arcacha, who has lived in New Orleans since 1963 and works with a part division of an advertising firm, said he knew nothing pertinent" he told New Orleans officials. He denied any activities while in New Orleans had anything to do with any plot to assassinate the president.

The New Orleans charges against Arcacha and Gordon Novak, named along with Andrew Feuerstein in the conspiracy to commit burglary.

A series of natural disasters in the southern states has put a lid on his assassination "plot." Arcacha, who was named as a co-defendant in the case, was ordered to appear before the grand jury yesterday.

William J. Drury, administrator of state records, was ordered in the subpoena to have the file on Shaw ready to be produced in criminal court here April 24.

EXCEPT FOR THE subpoena, a matter of public record, Garrison's controversial probe will go on in secret way, trailed by rumors and enriched by an odd light involving the Louisiana governor's office.

In Baton Rouge, Thomas Burbank, superintendent of state files, said his department recently bought "anti-bugging" electronic gear from Gordon Novak — the man Garrison is trying to pry out of Ohio for questioning in the probe.

Burbank said the equipment was purchased from a New Orleans firm headed by Novak after a 1968 report that the governor's office was being "bugged" with hidden microphones.

"We never did find any bugging in the office," said Burbank.

"A police state inquiry," he said, in condemning investigation. He was held near Columbus, Ohio, Saturday on warrants returned from a burglary complaint filed by Garrison. The $10,000 bond he could be will fight to the 1961 burglary investigation of explosives from a company's storage building in Lake. Its connection with the alleged assassination, if any, is unclear.

TOM P. MARTIN, a University of Southern California student, positive in a perjury indictment on his testimony to the grand jury March 29 about the burglary.

Martin told reporters today that he lived with W. Perry for a period last year and was certain that Perry had Lee Harvey Oswald show in the apartment.

He also said he was present when Perry was killed in Dallas and died in his apartment during October, during Garrison's investigation.

Records in the Louisiana attorney general's office show that Martin, a Systems Dynamics Systems Inc., was filing papers in New Orleans among them a "List of Novel among Operators."
